CARSON KRESSLEY AND THE "FASHION CRUSH"

Ever find yourself staring at a celebrity's wardrobe and thinking, "I would love to dress just like her"? Carson Kressley encourages that behavior in his book "Does This Book Make My Butt Look Big?" You may know him best from his makeovers for men on "Queer Eye for the Straight Guy" but now he's back with advice for us.

"I think some people are born with innate style, and some people really have to study it and work about it," says Kressley. "If you're in the latter group, never fear. The style guru has the perfect solution: the fashion crush. This is what Kressley defines as your "fashion role model."

"It might be someone who's very similar to you. They might have a similar build or a similar look, but maybe they're just a real style superstar and can give you great information on things that might work for you."

Kressley has a way of making fashion and beauty seem effortless, and he's out to prove that it doesn't take a lot to look and feel great. "It's not about having a lot of money. It's not about having tons of extra time," he says. "You just have to put in some effort, and even if you do a little bit of work, looking even 10 percent better can make you feel 100 percent better."

"AROUND THE WAY GIRL"

Taraji P. Henson (Dutton)

We are super excited to see that another BELLA cover girl has added "author" to her list of accomplishments. Golden Globe winner and Academy Award nominee Henson has written a funny, inspiring memoir that details her climb — no, her hustle — up the Hollywood ladder. From early struggles and disappointments to stunning turns on the small and big screen to her glamorous triumphs on the red carpet, Henson will win you over (if she hasn't already on "Empire") with her own brand of fierceness.
